It was the first feature film in the Irish language. Plot In the hills of west Galway, Tomás Ó Ceallaigh (Tadhg Ó Cianáin), in c. 1901, is a young married man living with his wife Maire (Mary Vaughan), who helps manage her father's farm. Four years later, Maire decides to go to America. She meets a girl named Margaret (Margaret O'Connell) and falls in love with her. She also hopes to find work and a new home. Maire and Margaret become the best of friends, while Tomás is left behind in the bleakness of Connemara. Tomás dreams of selling his land in Galway and moving to California. But fate steps in, and a famine in Ireland starts and spreads to the west. At first, it is localised in Clogher (Kilmacduagh), Connemara and Donegal. But eventually, the disease extends to south Galway. Maire, frightened and unhappy, decides to go back to her parents' house, take Margaret, and flee the famine and famine disease. But Maire and Margaret are not allowed to leave. The family is about to die of starvation. Left
