

.Q: Why are my SOAP request parameters getting cut off when posting? I've had my WCF service set up for some time, and am now trying to post a new feed using the correct soap envelope. The request seems to be made, because everything is being delivered, but a couple of the parameters are missing. I've checked that the method is returning a response of valid length, so the request itself seems fine. Here is the request, captured by Fiddler. The soap envelope is fairly standard. Note that the parameters are being cut off at 2048 characters - that's the max. I'd like the parameters to look more like the following: a b c d The WCF operation contract is set up as follows. Note that the `maxStringLengthAttribute` is set to 2048:

[OperationContract] [OperationBehavior(MaxReceivedMessageSize = 2048, MaxBufferSize = 2048)] MyMethod(string param1, string param2, string param3, string param4); In addition, I've set maxReceivedMessageSize="2147483647" in the binding section of my client config. This WCF service is self-hosted in IIS 6, and the behaviour is set as follows:

[DataContract(IsReference = true)] [AspNetCompatibilityRequirements(RequirementsMode = AspNetCompatibilityRequirementsMode.Allowed)] public class MyService: IMyService, IMyService1 { public MyService() { } [DataMember(IsRequired
